General Comment

I am capable of planning and executing my own retirement. I have worked my entire career and saved these funds for my retirement years. They are not the government's funds to manipulate, they are mine - I worked for them (while I was also paying my share of taxes). Everyone chooses how much and when to save for retirement. Some will have a more comfortable retirement because they planned more diligently, and it was their prerogative to do so. Everyone has a right to choose for themselves how to live their lives, and it is the right of "We, The People" to be free to live our lives (and handle our finances) without government intrusion. By all means, give whatever advice you deem reasonable, but place no controls or constraints on retirement savings. With the exception of reasonable taxation on tax-deferred accounts, the government has no right or reason to place controls or constraints on the private assets of any citizen.
